

DECIDES CARIBBEAN

Cultural Rights to foster behavioural changes and women's empowerment against Domestic Violence in Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean DECIDES CARIBBEAN develops research, training and awareness raising activities to root out biases, promote behavioural changes and reduce domestic violence in Barbados and the Eastern Caribbean Region (Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Grenada, St. Kitts and Nevis, St. Lucia and St. Vincent and the Grenadines).

The project will collect data, build the capacities of civil society organisations (CSOs) and other key stakeholders in justice, health and other departments, and launch communication campaigns. It is co-funded by the European Commission through the European Instrument for Democracy and Human Rights (EIDHR).

The project refers in particular to the cultural dimension of the issue of domestic violence, at different levels, promoting dialogue and cooperation between different relevant actors (CSOs with local and international remit, police, judiciary, local and national authorities, local health and social workers, teachers, and religious leaders).

In a comprehensive and societal approach that is preventative, responsive to the needs of victims, justice oriented and geared towards improving agency capacity & skills, the DECIDES CARIBBEAN project is designed to counter gendered attitudes and behaviours. It seeks to systematically include victims in political decisions that affect them and foster gender-sensitive approaches at all societal levels.

Duration of the project

24 months

March 2016 - February 2018

Budget

The DECIDES CARIBBEAN project is part of the DECIDES Program. In 2007, Interarts launched the Cultural Rights to Promote Health and Development - DECIDES program. It addresses issues of sexual and reproductive health: prevention of violence against women; the promotion of social inclusion and equity among youth, women and indigenous people; cultural rights; etc. The aim is to contribute to social change, to improve the health and welfare of people, and to the design and implementation of public policies in support of health and welfare. DECIDES has been supported by various funding agencies in Bolivia, Ecuador, Mali, Peru and Spain and implemented in collaboration with international NGOs such as FCI, PROMSEX or VHIR, among others.

Interarts promotes human development through culture and creates links between civil society, the private operators and public administrations. For more information: www.interarts.net
